Western Reserve Land Conservancy Overview

- Brett Rodstrom - Vice President of Eastern Field Operations of the Western Reserve Land Conservancy will give us an overview of this organization, and the benefits and opportunities for fisherman.

The Land Conservancy inspires citizens throughout our region in the effort to protect land and water for the benefit of all of our communities, creating a habitat that serves people. They envision a healthy and scenic landscape, a patchwork quilt of large natural areas connected by wildlife and river corridors, a beautiful region interspersed with well-planned agricultural, residential, and commercial development that supports the people of our region now and forever. They are conservationists, urban planners, biologists, lawyers, communicators, real-estate professionals, fundraisers and public policy experts. They share a passion for protecting our natural resources and revitalizing our communities

Dr. Michael Keith

World Fly Box

Dr. Michael Keith an Orthopedic Hand Surgeon at Cleveland Metropolitan General. Fly fisherman for more than 40 years. Mike has fished in North America, South America, Europe, the British Isles, Ireland, and Canada. He has caught most trout and salmon species. He is active in the Natural History Museum Trout Club and the fly fishing community here in Ohio. He is an all-around 'nice guy' always willing to teach, listen to a story and "spin a few himself".

Mike will present the fly box that he always carries with him on his fishing adventures. He has amassed over the years so that wherever he goes he will have flies that work.
